

Application Development

Written by Administrator

Wednesday, 10 March 2010 10:00 -

Custom software is a type of software that is developed either for a specific organization or function that differs from or is opposite of other already available software. It is generally not targeted to the mass market, but usually created for companies, business entities, and organizations.

We at NorthBridge deliver web-based as well as desktop applications built on .NET Framework, PHP and JAVA.